L.O. we are learning to use expanded noun phrases.

AS I step out onto the wet, shiny deck with its humongous barrels I can feel the cold wind. I can hear the crashing, booming waves that have the power to tip the boat.

I can smell salty sea and sometimes see fish jumping out of the dark, wavy water that crashes against the boat. Despite this there are whistling winds. The gloomy, grey clouds, filled with rain, look like they are going to pour buckets full of rain down any minute now.

repeat I can hear the booming, intense thunder with the power to turn you deaf. I think this is the worst storm I have ever been in. The rain is now bucketing down. I am getting what's the word . . . soaked!!

I nearly fell off of the boat! Despite the fact it has stopped raining, ^{but} not a beam of sunlight ^{has been let} through. The deck is still super slippery though.

I am going to miss my friends. Well at least I'm still alive and get to see my loving family. I have not seen them in a long time.

Even better if you remove repetition.
