

We are learning to use inverted commas to indicate speech ("").

Tuesday 3rd December 2019 :

The disappearance of the china rabbit from the sea.

By H L Selvely

Late Wednesday afternoon, as the clock struck two, a robbery took place. This house it happened in was at 64 Maryrose Street, Cornwall by the sea. In Maryrose street ^{there were was} a wonderful couple called Lawrence and Nellie. Nellie was a lovely lady, while she was happy with this stolen china rabbit.

Found late morning with a tiny bit of wind Lawrence had found a bundle of fish and the china rabbit. It was his last catch of the day and he sailed home as fast as he could to give it to Nellie!

"While it was missing all but a few tufts of fur from its ears, the rabbit was, really a precious item," Nellie recalls fondly. Nellie had a special time making and sewing up pieces pieces of the china rabbit. "He was a lovely rabbit" said Lawrence.

The stolen rabbit was made out of china it wasn't that bad. It's only a rabbit. Well Nellie lol! actually it was quite upsetting for your mother.

to whoever stole it, it was bad of them.

Are you sure
it wasn't you
Lolly? ~~Attila~~ because is it is I am sure you can just apologise.
Anyway didn't you say it that you were going to the
~~the~~ rubbish
to dump earlier
and did you take the china rabbit
to the rubbish
dump.

~~I know~~

I know who stole the china rabbit.
"Who, who?"
exclaimed Nellie.
It must be Lolly because I have put all my

clues together and I know it was Lolly...

★ you have used correct speech marks and I love when you finished with a eipsey.

WISH: Try and read back to see if it works with the paragraphs like makes sense in the same paragraph

★ your first paragraphs makes sense.