

Tuesday 11th February 2020

We are learning to evaluate and edit our writing by proposing reasoned changes to vocabulary, grammar and punctuation to enhance effects and clarify meaning.

I would like to start by thanking you all for ignoring my ideas whilst I was under their spell. The silky, captivating music was so enchanting. However, as we sailed away and the music faded, I saw their true form. That memory will haunt me forever, though it was soothed by their captivating music. I cannot bear to think how you must be feeling. You had to witness your captain going insane and fight your overwhelming instinct to follow his orders. Furthermore, you saw the ~~swart~~ sirens, who look like demons from the depths of Tartarus, and without giving in to Hades. For that, I must thank-you.

Secondly, I would like to talk to you about the future. If we should ever pass that island again, I encourage you not to do that act of foolishness that I just did. It is not worth it. If I were to have this opportunity again, I would take it. This is only because I have already heard them and they cannot scare me <sup>any</sup> ~~more~~ <sup>than they already have</sup>. This does not mean that you should do it. In fact, I forbid you to. This is all for your own good. Thank-you again, and long live Greece!